

Freedom of the press belongs to the man who owns one. NPRM 02-230 would limit the publication, authoring, and editing of rich, multimedia information by small organizations and individuals, and thus dramatically limit the content available to the world. It is as dangerous to free speech as licensing the ownership of printing presses.